

Hearing for the Holidays

How's your hearing?

Don't let a hearing loss interfere with your holiday activities. Unfortunately, many people aren't ready to admit that they have a hearing loss. If you tend to smile and nod when you can't follow a conversation, you most likely have some hearing loss.

Don't smile and nod anymore. You can take the first step back to connecting with your family and friends again. Have your hearing tested. It's a big step, but the rewards are limitless. Are you ready to hear what you've been missing?

A comprehensive hearing test usually takes between 15 and 20 minutes to complete. With a thorough explanation of your test results, you'll be able to find out why you've been having difficulty and what options are out there to make communication easier for you.

The latest advances in hearing aid technology have allowed patients to reconnect with society. Many of the frustrations that patients have experienced in prior years have been resolved.

As always, we offer a 30-day trial period to adjust to your "new" hearing. During that trial period, we ask that you get out into the "real" world and let us know what you "like" and "dislike" about the sounds that you're hearing. We feel that you'll find your hearing aids to be the best investments that you ever made.

Quality of life is our goal. For this reason, we have several options to fit most any budget. We want you to reconnect with your family and friends this holiday season.

Happy Holidays from the Hearing Center of Allen!